REPLY BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF OPPOSER'S
SECOND MOTION TO AMEND NOTICE OF OPPOSITION

Opposer, MonsterCommerce, LLC ("MonsterCommerce" or "Opposer"), hereby submits its reply brief in support of its second motion to amend the Amended Notice of Opposition to assert additional grounds for its Opposition to the application of Igor Lognikov ("Lognikov" or "Applicant") to register the mark TEMPLATEMONSTER.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

MonsterCommerce moved to amend its Notice of Opposition because through its diligence and dedication, it unearthed affirmative representations made by Applicant to a federal district court, which establish that Applicant is not the owner of the TEMPLATEMONSTER mark. Demonstrating the strength of the admissions uncovered by MonsterCommerce, Applicant says very little about the merits of MonsterCommerce's amendment. Instead, Applicant contends that the motion is prejudicial, because it will delay the presumed issuance of the registration, and that it is untimely, notwithstanding that MonsterCommerce independently secured evidence of Applicant's admissions with four months remaining in discovery, and before Applicant was required to produce those admissions to MonsterCommerce in discovery. MonsterCommerce's amendment, and the incontrovertible evidence accompanying it, conclusively establishes that Applicant is not the owner of the mark. The motion is neither prejudicial nor untimely because MonsterCommerce brought the motion expeditiously and Applicant has ample time to prepare his case in response to the motion.

ARGUMENT

I. MONSTERCOMMERCE'S AMENDMENT IS WELL-PLED

Applicant contends that MonsterCommerce's amendment is futile because the allegations "do not establish fraud" and because they cannot support Opposer's demand that Applicant modify his mark. Applicant's arguments ignore any plain reading of his admissions to the federal district court, ignore MonsterCommerce's amendment alleging that Applicant is not the owner of the mark, and ignore the basis of MonsterCommerce's allegation that an amendment of the drawing of the mark and disclaimer of the term "TEMPLATE" are required.

A. Lognikov is Not the Owner of the Mark TEMPLATEMONSTER*

Lognikov's representations attesting to his lack of business relationship or involvement with the website "templatemonster.com" are unambiguous. Lognikov, faced with allegations that he engaged in a massive conspiracy with specific websites to pirate copyrighted works, and faced with a temporary restraining order freezing his assets, laid out for a federal district court his precise relationship to the other defendants. Lognikov represented that he had no business relationship or involvement with the website located at the address "templatemonster.com," thus attempting to free himself of any liability for the acts and omissions of the website. (Lognikov Response at p. 9, Exh. 6 to Motion.) Lognikov further represented that he did not "own" the domain name templatemonster.com and had no control over the "owner" of this domain name, thus attempting to free himself of any liability for violating the court's order freezing his assets. (Lognikov Response at p. 12 and Exh. E thereto (p. 39), Exh. 6 to Motion). The transparent purpose of Lognikov's representations was to absolve himself of any liability for the conduct of the templatemonster.com website and the other defendant websites implicated in the massive pirating scheme alleged by plaintiff.

Having admitted to his complete independence from and lack of any control over the business of the templatemonster.com website, Lognikov has conceded that he cannot be the owner of the mark TEMPLATEMONSTER. Lognikov argues that all a mark owner is required to do is control the quality of services provided under the mark and that his representations in the Corbis Action that he "does not control the owner of the website address www.templatemonster.com" is not an assertion that Lognikov does not control the quality of services provided under the TEMPLATEMONSTER mark. (Lognikov opp. at p. 3.) This argument is baseless and blatantly ignores the totality of Lognikov's representations to the federal district court. Lognikov unequivocally stated in the Corbis Action, not only that he had no control over the domain name that is the basis of his trademark application, but that he had no business relationship or involvement with the templatemonster.com website. (Lognikov Response at pp. 12 and 39, Exh. 6 to Motion.) Lognikov, who has no business relationship or involvement with the templatemonster.com website, cannot possibly control the quality of the goods or services offered by that website. Therefore, Lognikov is not the owner of the mark and his representation to the contrary to the United States Patent and Trademark Office constitutes fraud.

Moreover, Lognikov cannot escape the import of his representations by contending that the defendants in the Corbis Action were "domain names" and, therefore, Applicant merely stated that he “did not have a business relationship with a thing.” (Lognikov opp. at p. 3 n.3.) The defendants in the Corbis Action were not “domain names.” They were website businesses operated by undisclosed individuals and entities that could only be identified by their domain name addresses because the true owners of these business went to extensive efforts to conceal their identities to the public. (Complaint at ¶¶ 14, 31-32, Exh. 3 to Motion.) Lognikov represented that he did not own, operate, or have a business relationship with the templatemonster.com website to distance himself from its activities, not to distinguish between a legal entity and a domain name, an issue that was never mentioned in the brief in question. The meaning and purpose of Lognikov’s explicit admissions in the Corbis Action are undeniable and cannot be contorted in the manner suggested by Lognikov here.

B. Amendment of the Mark and Disclaimer of the Term “Template” Are Required

Lognikov argues that MonsterCommerce’s allegations seeking an amendment of the mark and disclaimer of the term “template” are futile because there is no law that permits an opposer to dictate the manner in which an applicant uses his mark or the manner in which he chooses to register it. (Lognikov opp. at 3.) This argument misses the point entirely.<sup>1</sup>

MonsterCommerce’s allegations do not dictate how the TEMPLATEMONSTER mark is used.

They establish that the mark cannot be registered as set forth in the Application.

MonsterCommerce, as an Opposer, is legally entitled to challenge the manner in which

<sup>1</sup> Lognikov’s contention that the initial specimen supports use of the mark TEMPLATEMONSTER as one word merely proves MonsterCommerce’s point -- the applied-for mark has changed since the filing of the Application and the initial drawing page does not accurately reflect the mark as currently used. (See Lognikov opp. at p. 4 & n.5.) Notably, Lognikov has not cited to any current use of the mark in which the mark is depicted as one word instead of two words “TEMPLATE MONSTER”.

registration of the mark is sought. See TBMP § 309.03(c); Kellogg Co. v. Pack'Em Enterprises Inc., 14 U.S.P.Q.2d 1545, 1549 (stating that a party may oppose a mark on the ground that a portion of the mark is descriptive and should be disclaimed). In this case, MonsterCommerce is opposing the Application because the mark is not being used as depicted in the drawing page and because a disclaimer of the generic term “template” is required. These are sufficient grounds to oppose an application and, accordingly, MonsterCommerce’s amendment is well-pled. See id.

II. MONSTERCOMMERCE’S AMENDMENT IS NOT PREJUDICIAL

Lognikov’s leading argument in opposition to the motion is the legally unsupported contention that MonsterCommerce’s motion is prejudicial because “it unduly delays the issuance of the certificate of registration for TEMPLATEMONSTER.” As an initial matter, MonsterCommerce’s motion to amend has not caused a single day of delay. A week before MonsterCommerce filed its motion, Lognikov raced to the Board to file his premature motion to compel. Lognikov’s discovery motion caused the automatic suspension of the proceedings. Had Lognikov truly desired an expedient resolution of this matter, he would have made a good faith attempt to resolve discovery issues with MonsterCommerce, instead of filing the motion to compel. Likewise, he would have agreed to the standard Board terms set forth in MonsterCommerce’s proposed protective order, instead of necessitating a motion on this point and unduly delaying the parties’ respective productions of confidential documents. Any supposed “delay” in the resolution of this proceeding results from Lognikov’s discovery motion.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Lognikov also contends that MonsterCommerce delayed the proceedings when it filed its first motion to amend. MonsterCommerce filed its first motion to amend after Lognikov filed his motion to dismiss, which automatically suspended the proceedings. Again, Lognikov initiated the so-called delay that he now complains about.

Moreover, granting MonsterCommerce's motion to amend will hasten, not delay, the resolution of this matter. Given Lognikov's unequivocal admissions in the Corbis Action, this proceeding is ripe for summary disposition on the ground that Lognikov is not the owner of the TEMPLATEMONSTER mark. The swift conclusion that Lognikov purports to seek will flow directly from the entry of MonsterCommerce's amendment.

In sum, Lognikov will not suffer any prejudice from the entry of the proposed amendment because it is being made during the early stage of discovery and Lognikov has ample time to prepare his case in response to the amendment. Lognikov's claims of prejudice resulting from any delay in the resolution of this proceeding are both factually and legally unsupportable.

III. MONSTERCOMMERCE'S MOTION IS TIMELY

Lognikov argues that Opposer's motion, made with four months remaining in discovery and before Lognikov has responded to Opposer's discovery, is untimely because Opposer should have discovered Lognikov's admissions sooner. To the contrary, Opposer's motion is remarkably early under the circumstances. On or about February 7, 2007, Opposer independently discovered Applicant's representations that he has no business relationship or involvement with the website templatemonster.com, and no control over the domain name www.templatemonster.com, by reviewing one of the many briefs filed in the Corbis Action. (Jacobs decl. at ¶ 2, Exh. A.) The plaintiff in Corbis alleged illegal copying of stock photographs by Lognikov, the website templatemonster.com, and others -- it did not concern rights to the TEMPLATEMONSTER mark or any other MONSTER mark. Thus, many litigants may not have looked beyond the smattering of internet news articles reporting the case. Those parties would not have discovered Lognikov's admissions until he was required to produce the information in discovery, which deadline in this proceeding is March 9, 2007.

Further complicating matters is the sheer volume of documents associated with the Corbis Action. The Corbis docket contains 331 entries. (Corbis Docket, Exh. B.) Lognikov's statements forming the basis of Opposer's Second Motion to Amend are contained in docket entry 258, which is a 77 page submission. (Id.; Lognikov Response at p. 12 and Exh. E (p. 39), Exh. 6 to Motion.) Lognikov's argument, that MonsterCommerce should have discovered Lognikov's representations to a different tribunal in a copyright infringement action sooner that it did, belies reasonableness. It also ignores the central fact that Lognikov has a duty to produce this material in discovery, which he has yet to do. MonsterCommerce promptly filed its motion after discovering Lognikov's admissions and could not reasonably have been expected to file the motion any earlier under the circumstances. Lognikov, who has known these facts all along and has not yet produced them in discovery, has no basis to complain about the timing of MonsterCommerce's motion. Lognikov has ample time to prepare his case in response to the motion. Thus, the motion is timely. See Commodore Electronics, Ltd. v. CBM Kabushiki Kaisha, 26 U.S.P.Q.2d 1503 (TTAB 1993); Flatley v. Trump, 11 U.S.P.Q.2d 1284 (TTAB 1989).

CONCLUSION

For all the foregoing reasons, MonsterCommerce respectfully requests that the Board grant its Second Motion to Amend.

Respectfully submitted,

DECLARATION OF HARA K. JACOBS

2. On or about February 7, 2007, I reviewed certain documents filed in an action instituted by Corbis Corporation ("Corbis") in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida against Igor Lognikov ("Lognikov"), templatemonster.com, and various other web site entities alleging that they had engaged in a vast conspiracy to pirate Corbis' copyrighted photographic images. One of the documents I reviewed was docket entry number 258, a response by Lognikov and certain other defendants to Corbis' motion to show cause why defendants were not in contempt of the Court's temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction. During my review of this document, I discovered Lognikov's representations that he has no business relationship or involvement with the website www.templatemonster.com, and no control over the domain name www.templatemonster.com.

I declare, under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.
